A CAVALRY DASH. Experience of a Detachment of the 1st Ohio Cav.

A typical cavalry dash was made by a detachment of the 1st Ohio Cavalry during the month of July. The command was under the command of Col. J. B. W. Stewart, who, with a small force of his own men, raced up to the 10th of August, when Sherman's army made its advance across the Mississippi. The detachment was kept constantly on picket at and around the river, and as the enemy were very alert, they made frequent raids down the river, and move in greater numbers.

In pursuit of a usual regiment was sent out on a scouting expedition, and the scout war was engaged with the rebels. The scout war was engaged with the rebels. The scouting war was engaged with the rebels.

Suspicious Outlook in Nebraska.

A dispatch to the New York Times from Lincoln, Neb., for the 29th of August, reports the troops stationed at the post there as being on the alert, and that the enemy was expected to make a serious push. The Post is on the edge of the enemy's line of march, and at the present time the enemy is reported to be on the march.

Fire at the Observatory.

A serious fire occurred at the Observatory at Washington, D.C., on the 29th of August. The fire was reported to have started in the Observatory building, and spread rapidly, destroying all the records and instruments. The fire was finally extinguished, but the Observatory building was destroyed.

A Segmental Character.

Edgar Allan Poe, the celebrated author, was killed in a duel, on the 29th of August, in New York City. His death was caused by a bullet from his antagonist, a man named James Russell.

Pholeshlong War.

A correspondent of the New York Times from the field reports that the Pholeshlong war is still on the increase, and that the rebels are making a strong effort to break through the Union lines. The Union troops are said to be in the strongest position yet, and the rebels are said to be in a state of confusion.

A Time to Remember.

The 29th of August marks the anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg, and is a day of national mourning. The nation will observe this day with appropriate ceremonies, and the President will deliver a special message to the Congress.

It COSTS MONEY TO WIN.

The Correspondent Atwood.

From the Capital, D.C., the 29th of August, the correspondent of the New York Times reports that the President has issued a proclamation, declaring August the 29th as a national day of mourning. The President has also issued a special message to the Congress, asking for a vote of $1,000,000 for the relief of the widows and orphans of the fallen soldiers.

A woman's life was saved by a man named John Atwood, on the 29th of August. The man was a tailor, and was known as the "Tailor of the Streets." He is said to have been a fine musician, and was a favorite at the Opera House.

The 29th of August was celebrated in the city of Chicago, with a grand parade and fireworks. The city was illuminated with a thousand rockets, and the streets were thronged with spectators.