HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE OHIO
Huntsville, Alabama - July 12, 1862.

Lieutenant-Colonel COXKLIN
Commanding Thirty-fifth Indiana Volunteers
Fayetteville

SIR: The general commanding directs that you march with your regiment for Elk River Bridge, on Chattanooga road, as heretofore ordered. It will probably be best for you to move via Winchester. On the march you will keep on the alert for the rebel cavalry which has been through that part of the country. You will report your arrival and anything of interest that may occur or that you may observe. Telegraph stations have been ordered to be established at Tullahoma and Cowan. It is not the intention to put your regiment as a guard on the line, but to put it in a position suitable for future movements. You will, however, guard the bridge and railroad while you are near it.

Very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

J. M. WRIGHT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

On July 14, 1862, the 35th marched from Fayetteville for Shelbyville. (Page 134)

On July 20, 1862, Brig. General W. S. Smith, commanding the guards on the Nashville and Decatur, Nashville and Chattanooga, and Memphis and Charleston Railroads, reported: (Page 191)

"The Thirty-fifth Indiana, one of the worst behaved regiments I have ever seen, got off the trains for Murfreesboro this morning."

On August 4, 1862, Maj. General Don Carlos Buell reported that the 35th was in General Nelson's command in advance of McMinnville. (Page 258)

On October 8, 1862, the 35th was in Colonel Stanely Matthews' Twenty-third Brigade, Fifth Division, Army of the Ohio, at Perryville under Colonel Bernard F. Mullen. (Page 593)
Mr. Willard Keith

Dear Sir

I will rite you a few lines to let you no that I am well at present and I hope these few lines will find you the same. I have ritten you several letters but still I get no ancer and what the reason is I cannot tell if you have not time to rite you can get some one elce that has got time. I am ancious to hear from my Eastern Relation. I heard from Uncle Flury (Fleury) that Grandmother was unwell and I would like to hear from home once more and to have all the particulars given I am shure it won't take you a dat to rite to me if you wish to.

I have not heard from any person in the East but one since I have been in the Army and I have not heard from Henry in 2 years and I cant tell where he is at present I have been enquiring more about Georges Death latly

On back of the sheet of paper it reads:

he was a Scout for Genl. Dodge and was Killed at Trenton, Tennessee in Dec. 62 he had a watch worth about $30 Dollars and the Quartermaster got it and kept it until lately he was Captured and the watch with him.

Please rite soon and tell me how all the neibors get a long Tell Grandmother I hope to see her once more.

No more at present from your Nephew

2d Brigade 1st Division 4th Army Corps

In the summer of 1863, the Confederate army at Tullahoma was weakened by detachments sent for the defense of Vicksburg, and Bragg found himself exposed to the risk of an attack by Rosecrans from Murfreesboro simultaneously with a movement by Burnside from the Ohio to drive Buckner out of Knoxville. Bragg therefore determined to fall back to Chattanooga. To cover the retreat, he ordered Brigadier-General John Hunt Morgan with a picked force from his division of mounted infantry to ride into Kentucky, breaking up the railroad, attacking Rosecrans' detachments, and threatening Louisville. To gain more time, Morgan wanted to extend the raid by a wide sweep beyond the Ohio, but Bragg would not consent.

Morgan set out from Burkesville, on July 2, with 2,460 men and 4 guns, ostensibly to execute Bragg's orders, but really bent on carrying out his own plan. Although ten thousand Federal troops under Generals Hartsuff and Judah were watching the Cumberland at various points, Morgan skillfully effected the difficult crossing, overcame Judah's opposition, and rode north, followed by all the Federal detachments within reach.

On July 4, he attacked the 25th Michigan, Col. Orlando R. Moore, in a strong position guarding the bridge over Green River, and drew off with a heavy loss. On July 5, he defeated and captured the garrison of Lebanon, and then marched by Springfield and Bardstown, to Brandenburg on the Ohio, where he arrived on the morning of July 9. At once he began crossing on two captured steamboats. The passage was disputed by a gun-boat, and by some home-guards with a field-piece on the Indiana shore, but by midnight the whole command was in Indiana. Twenty-four hours later, General E. H. Hobson followed, leading the advance of Judah's forces in pursuit. But Indiana and Ohio were now in arms, and at every step their militia had to be eluded or overcome; to do either caused delay.

Turning to the east, Morgan rode through Corydon, Salem, Tienna, Lexington, Paris, Vernon, Dupont, Sumansville, and Harrison, Ohio, detaching to burn bridges and confuse the pursuit, impressing fresh horses, his men pillaging freely. Under cover of a feint on Hamilton, Ohio, he marched by night un molested through the suburbs of Cincinnati, and at last, after dark on the evening of July 13, he reached the bank where from the first he had planned to escape on the Ohio River. Morning found his pursuers closing in from all directions. Morgan with many of his men (about 300) escaped across the river but many were also drowned. All the rest were killed (120) or captured (700). After nearly reaching the West Virginia shore, Morgan himself returned, and with the remnant made for Pennsylvania, hotly pursued, and finally surrendered on the 20th of July, near Beaver Creek, with 364 officers and men.

Later on Morgan commanded in south-western Virginia. After another disastrous raid into Kentucky, he was killed at Greenville, Tennessee, on the 4th of September, 1864.

EDITORS NOTE: It has been said Grandfather Keith met John H. Morgan when taken prisoner in 1862 and Morgan excused him from prison because of his youth and on the premise that he would return home and not take up arms against the South again. Grandfather Keith returned home to Indiana, re-joined the same day and returned to his regiment.

John Hunt Morgan was a cousin of Sarah Allen Yoakum, who later became the wife of Willis B. Keith. The relationship was a second cousin to Sarah Allen Yoakum and a first cousin to her mother, i.e. the mother-in-law of Willis F. Keith.
The Thirty-Fifth (or First Irish) Regiment was organized at Louisville and mustered in on the 11th of December, 1861, with John C. Allen as colonel, and engaged in the battle of Shiloh where it was captured by the enemy. It remained in a camp near Corinth for six weeks, and then moved with Buell's army toanding Creek, and thence to Nashville. On the 22nd of May, 1862, the Thirty-Fifth, as part of the Sixty-First (Second Irish) Regiment and the unassigned recruits for the same were ordered to proceed to Tennessee, in charge of Colonel Bernard F. Mullen, of the Sixty-First, and there join the Thirty-Fifth, with whom regiment they were to be consolidated. These transferred men joined the Thirty-Fifth at Nashville, where the consolidation was perfected; Colonel Mullen becoming Lieutenant Colonel, and subsequently Colonel of the regiment. From Nashville, the Thirty-Fifth moved into the interior of Tennessee as far as McMinnville, from which place it marched during September, 1862, with Buell's army to Louisville, as part of Stannard's Brigade, Van Cleve's Division of Crittenden's Corps.

From Louisville, the regiment marched in the pursuit of Bragg through Kentucky, participating in the battle of Perryville, October 7th, and in the skirmishes of the march. Returning to Nashville, it remained inactive until December, when it proceeded on a foraging expedition, during which it had a severe skirmish with the enemy on the 9th of December at Dobbins' Ford, near Lavergne, losing five killed and thirty-five wounded. After this it marched with Rosecrans' army toward Murfreesboro, where it participated in the battle of Stone River, on the 31st of December, 1862, and 1st and 2nd of January, 1863. In this engagement the regiment fought on the extreme left, and sustained a loss of one-third of the number engaged, having 29 killed, 72 wounded and 33 missing, making a total loss of 134. The Thirty-Fifth remained in the vicinity of Murfreesboro until the march upon Chattanooga was commenced, in which it took part. In the engagement at Chicamauga on the 19th and 20th of September, it participated, sustaining heavy losses.

While encamped at Shell Mound, Tennessee, the regiment re-enlisted as a veteran organization, on the 16th of December, 1863, and soon after started for home on veteran furlough, reaching Indianapolis on the 2nd of January, 1864. Returning to Tennessee in February, it went into camp at Blue Springs, Tennessee, until the Atlanta campaign opened. On the 3rd of May, as part of the 3rd Brigade of the 1st Division of the 4th Corps, it moved from camp and participated in all the marches, battles, skirmishes and scouts of that historical campaign. At Kenesaw Mountain, on the night of the 20th of June, while the regiment was in the front line, it was fiercely and unexpectedly attacked and thrown into complete confusion. The regiment rallied, and for half an hour fought a desperate hand-to-hand conflict with the enemy, the men using their muskets as clubs, and beginning the enemy whenever opportunity offered, and finally, with the aid of a portion of another regiment of the brigade, they drove the enemy back. The Thirty-Fifth lost in this affair 11 killed, including its commanding officer, Major Boffice, and 51 wounded. On the 4th of July, when near Marietta, the regiment, while on duty as part of the skirmish line, advanced and captured the enemy's rifle pits and twenty-eight prisoners. This was accomplished notwithstanding the regiments on its right and left were repulsed, leaving the Thirty-Fifth exposed to severe flank fire. Its losses were four killed and seven wounded.
After the passage of the Chattahoochee river, the regiment, being at the location, was ordered to guard the supply train of the corps, and to advance this far until the 1st of August, when it was to effect a movement on the right flank of the enemy, and take part in the battle. On the 18th of September, the regiment entered Atlanta, where it remained until commenced its retrograde movement on the rear of General "Lee, with whom it joined the 4th Corps in pursuit. At Franklin, Tennessee, the regiment, having received four hundred drafted men and substitutes, was placed in the front line, on the 30th of November, and gallantly repulsed a charge which the enemy made upon the works. In the two days' fight at Nashville, it took a conspicuous part, but fortunately lost but few men. After the retreat and complete surrender of the enemy, the regiment participated in the pursuit as far as Duck River, when it was detached and assigned to the charge of the pontoon train.

In the movements of the 4th Corps to Huntsville and Knoxville, the regiment took part returning to Nashville in the spring of 1865. In June, it was transferred with the 4th Corps to Texas, where it remained in duty with Sherman's army until the month of September, when it was mustered out of service and returned home. Reaching Indianapolis on the 20th of October, it was present at a public reception given to returned troops in the Capitol grounds, on the 1st, at which addresses were made by Governor Morton and others.

The losses to the regiment from the commencement of the Atlanta campaignup to and including the battle of Nashville, are officially reported as follows:

Killed, one officer and twenty men.

Wounded, two officers and one hundred sixteen men.

Total killed and wounded - 139.

My Dear Mr. Cooper:

In re the Civil War Times, August, 1964, page 45.

There is, as per Mr. Hubert Hawkins, the Indiana State Historical Society, little extant on the 35th. Indiana.

However, in researching for a book I'm trying to do on the New York Irish, I ran across two different, and, to me, highly interesting pieces. They both are currently in my library, and if either one or both pique your interest, would be very happy to forward Zeroyx copies to you.

The first is to be found in Indiana Roll of Honor, and there are several copies of this lying about the bookstalls ---- though this would not negate my offer of a Zeroyx copy.

The 35th., being almost a totally Hibernian outfit, sought the services of the Rev. Peter Paul Cooney, a Holy Cross padre from Notre Dame.

Much to everyone's sorrow, Fr. Cooney's papers were destroyed in a fire which almost destroyed the University ---- and this just prior to his putting them in any publishable form. Then, and still more sorrowful, Fr. Cooney died before he could again set down his recollections.

Fr. Tom McAvoy, University of Notre Dame Archivist, wrote the "Civil War Papers of Fr. Peter Paul Cooney" some years ago, and this may be gotten on inter-library loan from the University.

The second reference that I alluded to above is borrowed from the University of Notre Dame Archives as is an unpublished Manuscript by David Powers Conyngham who was an Irish Military observer during the war.
Conyngham published the Irish Brigade, but died before this manuscript could go for editing. The title is Heroes of the Cross: Priests and Nuns on the Battlefield; and it is the section on Cooney that I could send on to you if you wish.

I have a microfilm copy of the New York Irish-American, 1860-65, which was prepared for me by the New York Public Library. This has many, many references to the Indiana Regiments built along the ethnic lines of the Irish among them the 35th. You might search here.

I presume that you have already searched Dwyer, Trevelyan Miller, the O.Rs, Benson Lossing, etc.

Would be very nice to hear from you.

Very truly yours,

VIRGIL L. LEVY, D.D.S.

MESSAGE:

Dear Dr. Levy:

Forgive my delay in acknowledging receipt of your kind letter of April 7. Have been very busy and unable to keep caught up - especially on personal matters.

I appreciate very much the materials you sent to me. I only wish I had the money, as well as the time, to pursue the research on this diary and related materials as regards the individuals mentioned, battles, etc. I have obtained some Xerox copies relative to Father Peter Paul Cooney and found them most interesting. Thank you for advising me where to look for this material.

REPLY:

The name of my great-grandfather was Willis Benson Keith - my father's mother's father if you understand. Why didn't I say - my Grandmother's father?? Any way, only being an enlisted man as private and working up to the rank of seargent I doubt that he would be mentioned anywhere. I would be thrilled to learn if he ever was of course!

Anyway, I am mailing you a printed copy of the diary and related information I collected in my researching the 35th Indiana. You will note the diary is mainly "jottings" as one "pubisher" - sorry, publisher - told me and of no historical value. Granted it does interest mainly the relatives of W. P. Keith but several "buffs" who have read this, found it both interesting and amusing. I hope you do too. Please advise me when you receive this as I am mailing it from my business address. Excuse the bad typing - am in a rush and don't want to delay sending this out to you so will mail it as is.

Regards,
