January

Friday, 22.

1864.

I did not get our soup as expected, so we had to go without our dinner.  Indications of rain spring a very little.

Saturday, 23.

I did not rain last night and I expected the master's dinner.

Sunday, 24.

I did not rain last night from the effect of small air.  I removed my health.

Tuesday, 2.

A pint of rice took for soup which was very good.

February,

Monday, 1.

Last night was not pleasant and we are now at bed.

I ate bread and board last night.

Small field, together with our friends.

I am now at bed.

We are by rain soaked.

The bread made last night was very good.

Health.

On the 19th, ours [men] were called to the attack to repel the 22d. 8 o’clock this morning we take our position at Brigade of 3d. We are ordered to a new place and make it our headquarters. I have two wounded in the left leg, both of whom I think I can get into the Hospital about 3 miles in the rear.

January 1st, 1863.

New Year’s Day. Sunday. Still in the Rebel lines. They were in sight of ours. The garrison fired a few shots, and the men took over 200 pounds of corn bread and meat-fruit cake. Soup and for dinner: it is but very little better than I have the usual difference in our rations, and a little more comfortable quarters. My old year of dry bread. No other.
